Clarum etiam in Africano superiore ac Ti. Graccho depositarum inimicitarum exemplum, si quidem ad cuius mensae sacra odio dissidentes uenerant, ab ea et amicitia et adfinitate iuncti discesserunt: non contentus enim Scipio auctore senatu in Capitolio iouis epulo cum Graccho concordiam communicasse filiam quoque ei Corneliam protinus ibi despondit Valerius Maximus, Facorum et dictorum memorabilium libri novem, Liber IV, II, 3.  http://www.thelatinlibrary.com/valmax4.html	A good example of enmity laid aside we find also in the elder Africanus and Ti. Gracchus. For they came to the rites of a sacred table with a boiling hatred towards each other, and from the same table they departed entire friends. For Scipio at the urging of the senate entered into friendship with Gracchus on the Capitol at the feast of Jupiter; but not content with that, he there also espoused his daughter Cornelia to him. Valerius Maximus, Memorable Deeds and Sayings, 4.2.3.
